When Mt. Tahoma
(now Rainier)
was made a national park in 1899, tourists rode the Lake Park Railway to its terminus at what is now 161st and Park Avenue.
Motorcades then departed from the station for the rest of the journey to Mount Rainier, which took another two days.

An 1890's restored gable & wing farmhouse, the Prairie House Museum contains period furnishings and an interpretive room with changing exhibits on local history. Several outbuildings complete the prairie farm setting.
